Re: FOIA Request NLRB-2022-001519

Dear Jessica Vidal (Payne & Fears LLP):

This is in response to your request, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, received on July 11, 2022, in which you seek any documents related to any complaint or charge made by [a specifically named individual] against Albertson's. You agreed to assume financial responsibility for the processing of your request in the amount of $185.00.

We acknowledged your request on July 11, 2022. On September 8, 2022, in an email with a member of my staff, you clarified that you were looking for all documents in Albertson's LLC, Case No. 21-CA-257504.

Your request is granted in part and denied in part, as explained below.

The Agency neither admits nor denies that the charge in this case was filed by the individual you named in your request because any such confirmation or denial would harm the privacy interest protected by Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6) and (b)(7)(C); See Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009, 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1976). Conducting a search by an individual's name, without case numbers, could constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Individuals named in a law enforcement investigation, including third parties mentioned in investigatory files, as well as witnesses and informants who provide information during the course of an investigation, have such a privacy interest. See Nation Magazine v. U.S. Customs Serv., 71 F.3d 885, 894 (D.C. Cir. 1995); Van Bourg, Allen, Weinberg & Roger v. NLRB, 751 F.2d 982, 985 (9th Cir. 1985). For these reasons, the portion of your request that seeks any documents related to any complaint or charge made by [a specifically named individual] against Albertson's" is denied.

However, we were able to conduct a search because you provided an NLRB case number. After conducting a search of the Agency's electronic casehandling system, NxGen, 159 pages of responsive, releasable records from the requested case file were located, which are attached.

After a review, I have determined that portions of the records are exempt from disclosure under Exemptions 5, 6, 7(C), and 7(D) of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), (b)(6), (b)(7)(C), and (b)(7)(D)). The records are being provided to you either in their entirety or partially redacted to the extent they were found to be reasonably segregable from the exempt portions of the records.

Specifically, the redactions are made pursuant to Exemption 5, which protects certain inter- and intra-agency communications protected by the deliberative process and/or attorney work product privileges. Additionally, redactions have been made the records to protect the privacy interests of individuals named therein. These redactions were made pursuant to FOIA Exemption 6, which pertains to information the release of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, FOIA Exemption 7(C), which pertains to records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, the release of which could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, and Exemption 7(D), which pertains to information the release of which “could reasonably be expected to disclose the identity of a confidential source...” where the information is provided under an express assurance of confidentiality, or in circumstances from which such an assurance could be reasonably inferred. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6), (b)(7)(C), and (b)(7)(D).

Your request is denied to the extent that other responsive records yielded from the search are being withheld in their entirety pursuant to FOIA Exemptions 5, 6, 7(C), and 7(D) (5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), (b)(6), (b)(7)(C), and (b)(7)(D)).

Regarding the records being withheld, 15 pages are withheld pursuant to Exemption 5, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), including internal communications and memoranda.

Exemption 5 allows agencies to withhold “inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency,” and covers records that would “normally be privileged in the civil discovery context.” NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975); Tax Analysts v. IRS, 117 F.3d 607, 616 (D.C. Cir. 1997). The deliberative process and the attorney work-product privileges are two of the primary privileges incorporated into Exemption 5.

The deliberative process privilege protects the internal decision-making processes of government agencies to safeguard the quality of agency decisions. Competitive Enter. Inst. v. OSTP, 161 F. Supp.3d 120, 128 (D.D.C. 2016). The basis for this privilege is to protect and encourage the creative debate and candid discussion of alternatives. Jordan v. U.S. Dep’t. of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 772 (D.C. Cir.1978). Two fundamental requirements must be satisfied before an agency may properly withhold a record pursuant to the deliberative process privilege. First, the record must be predecisional, i.e., prepared in order to assist an agency decision-maker in arriving at the decision. Renegotiation Bd. v. Grumman Aircraft Eng'g Corp., 421 U.S. 168, 184 (1975); Judicial Watch, Inc. v. FDA, 449 F.3d 141, 151 (D.C. Cir. 2006). Second, the record must be deliberative, i.e., "it must form a part of the agency's deliberative process in that it makes recommendations or expresses opinions on legal or policy matters." Judicial Watch, Inc. v. FDA, 449 F.3d at 151 (quoting Coastal States Gas Corp. v. U.S. Dep't of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 866 (D.C. Cir. 1980)). To satisfy these requirements, the agency need not "identify a specific decision in connection with which a memorandum is prepared. Agencies are . . . engaged in a continuing process of examining their policies; this process will generate memoranda containing recommendations which do not ripen into agency decisions; and the lower courts should be wary of interfering with this process." Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. at 151 n.18 (1975). Moreover, the protected status of a predecisional record is not altered by the subsequent issuance of a decision, see, e.g., Fed. Open Mkt. Comm. v. Merrill, 443 U.S. 340, 360 (1979); Elec. Privacy Info. Ctr. v. DHS, 384 F. Supp. 2d 100, 112-13 (D.D.C. 2005) or by the agency opting not to make a decision. See Judicial Watch, Inc. v. Clinton, 880 F. Supp. 1, 13 (D.D.C. 1995), aff'd, 76 F.3d 1232 (D.C. Cir. 1996) (citing Russell v. U.S. Dep't of the Air Force, 682 F.2d 1045 (D.C. Cir. 1982)).

The attorney work-product privilege protects records and other memoranda that reveal an attorney's mental impressions and legal theories that were prepared by an attorney, or a non-attorney supervised by an attorney, in contemplation of litigation. See United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 239 n.13 (1975); Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 509-10 (1947). The attorney work-product privilege extends to records prepared in anticipation of both pending litigation and foreseeable litigation and even when no specific claim is contemplated at the time the attorney prepared the material. Schiller v. NLRB, 964 F.2d 1205, 1208 (D.C. Cir. 1992). Furthermore, the privilege protects any part of a record prepared in anticipation of litigation, not just the portions concerning opinions and legal theories, see Judicial Watch v. U.S. Dep't of Justice, 432 F.3d 366, 371 (D.C. Cir. 2005), and is intended to protect an attorney's opinions, thoughts, impressions, interpretations, analyses and strategies. Id.; see also Wolfson v. United States, 672 F. Supp.2d 20, 29 (D.D.C. 2009). See Judicial Watch, 432 F.3d at 371 (finding that an agency need not segregate and disclose non-exempt material if a record is fully protected as work product). Additionally, the protection provided by Exemption 5 for attorney work-product records is not subject to defeat even if a requester could show a substantial need for the information and undue hardship in obtaining it from another source. See FTC v. Grolier, Inc., 462 U.S. 19, 28 (1983). Further, protection against the disclosure of work product records extends even after litigation is terminated. Id.

Here, the responsive records being withheld meet the requirements for Exemption 5 protection under both the deliberative process and attorney work-product privileges. They are internal and predecisional. They reflect the views of the General Counsel and her Regional staff concerning prosecutorial policies and strategies in the processing of this unfair labor practice case. Since they contain proposed legal strategy in the case, these internal casehandling records clearly reflect the deliberative and consultative process of the Agency that Exemption 5 protects from disclosure. Sears, Roebuck and Co., 421 U.S. at 150-52.

Additionally, the content of the records is also attorney work-product, as it reflects legal analysis and/or opinions of the General Counsel's staff and was created to assist superiors in their decision-making process, in anticipation of possible litigation. Accordingly, the records are being withheld in their entirety.

Other investigatory records are being withheld in their entirety under FOIA Exemptions 6, 7(C), and 7(D), since their disclosure could constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy and/or reveal a confidential source.

Exemption 6 permits agencies to withhold information about individuals in "personnel and medical and similar files" where the disclosure of the information "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). Am. Immigration Lawyers Ass'n v. Exec. Office for Immigration Review, 830 F.3d 667, 673 (D.C. Cir. 2016). The "files" requirement covers all information that "applies to a particular individual." Ayuda, Inc. v. FTC, 70 F.Supp.3d 247,264 (D.D.C. 2014) (citing U.S. Dep't of State v. Wash. Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 601-02 (1982)). "'Similar files' has been interpreted broadly to include '[g]overnment records on an individual which can be identified as applying to that individual.'" Pavement Coatings Technology Council v. United States Geological Survey, 2019 WL 7037527, *8 (D.D.C. Dec. 19, 2019) (quoting Wash. Post Co., 456 at 602). See Judicial Watch, Inc. v. FDA, 449 F.3d 141, 198-199 (D.C. Cir. 2006) (Exemption 6 may exempt not just files, but personal information such as names and addresses). Exemption 7(C) permits agencies to withhold information compiled for law enforcement purposes where disclosure of the information "could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); U.S. Dep't of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 756 (1989), see also Brennan Center for Justice at New York University School of Law v. DOJ, 2020 WL 1189091, *3-4, (D.D.C. Mar. 12, 2020) (reaffirming that Exemption 7(C) imposes a "lower bar for withholding" than Exemption 6,).

Application of Exemptions 6 and 7(C) requires a two-part balancing test that considers: (1) whether there is a legitimate personal privacy interest in the requested information, and, if so; (2) whether there is a countervailing public interest in disclosure that outweighs the privacy interest. Judicial Watch, Inc. v. Nat'l Archives & Records Admin., 214 F. Supp. 3d 43, 58 (D.D.C. 2016), aff'd, 876 F.3d 346 (D.C. Cir. 2017), citing Nat'l Archives & Records Admin. v. Favish, 541 U.S. 157, 171 (2004). With respect to the first factor, the Supreme Court has described Exemptions 6 and 7(C) as reflecting privacy interests in "avoiding disclosure of personal matters," Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 762, maintaining the “individual’s control of information concerning his or her person,” id. at 763, avoiding “disclosure of records containing personal details about private citizens,” id. at 766, and “keeping personal facts away from the public eye,” id. at 769. Consistent with these concerns, privacy interests have been recognized for individuals named in a law enforcement investigation, including third parties mentioned in investigatory files, as well as witnesses and informants who provide information during the course of an investigation. See Rugiero v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 257 F.3d 534, 552 (6th Cir. 2001); Nation Magazine v. U.S. Customs Serv., 71 F.3d 885, 894 (D.C. Cir. 1995); and Van Bourg, Allen, Weinberg & Roger v. NLRB, 751 F.2d 982, 985 (9th Cir. 1985).

The records are exempt from disclosure under the above balancing test, and are, thus, being withheld. The withheld records are in investigative files created or obtained by the Agency for the purpose of enforcing the National Labor Relations Act, and contain individuals’ names, addresses, and other identifying information that fit squarely within the types of privacy interests that Exemptions 6 and 7(C) were intended to protect from disclosure. By contrast, I perceive no countervailing public interest in disclosure. The public’s interest in disclosure depends on “the extent to which disclosure would serve the ‘core purpose of the FOIA,’ which is ‘contribut[ing] significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government.’” U.S. Dep’t of Def. v. Fed. Labor Relations Auth., 510 U.S. 487, 495 (1994) (emphasis in original), quoting Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 775. As the Supreme Court further explained in Nat’l Archives & Records Admin., 541 U.S. at 172, to defeat a privacy interest there must be some indication that the “public interest sought to be advanced is a significant one, an interest more specific than having the information for its own sake . . . [and that] the information is likely to advance that interest.” No such public interest is evident here that outweighs the private interests identified above. For the foregoing reasons, the records are protected from disclosure under Exemptions 6 and 7(C).

In addition to Exemptions 6 and 7(C), these records are withheld under Exemption 7(D). They contain information provided to the Agency under an express promise of confidentiality, and, accordingly, are exempt from disclosure. Exemption 7(D) permits an agency to withhold records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes that “could reasonably be expected to disclose the identity of a confidential source . . .” 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(D). A “source” is considered confidential if he or she “provided information under an express assurance of confidentiality or in circumstances from which such an assurance could reasonably be inferred.” See U.S. Dep’t of Justice v. Landano, 508 U.S. 165, 172 (1993). Exemption 7(D) permits withholding any information furnished by a source that might disclose or point to his or her identity. See Radowich v. U.S. Attorney, Dist. of Md., 658 F.2d 957, 960 n.10 (4th Cir. 1981).

One of the purposes underlying Exemption 7(D) is to “encourage cooperation with law enforcement agencies by enabling the agencies to keep their informants’ identities confidential.” United Technologies Corp. v. NLRB, 777 F.2d 90, 94 (2d Cir. 1985). This is “particularly important to agencies, such as the NLRB, . . . [which] must depend on the information provided by the charging party and its witnesses” who are often the “sole source of the Board’s information in unfair labor practice cases.” Id. (“An employee-informant’s fear of employer retaliation can give rise to a justified expectation of confidentiality.”). Significantly, a source’s identity can be withheld under Exemption 7(D) even if his or her identity is or becomes known through other means. See, e.g., Jones v. FBI, 41 F.3d 238, 248-49 (6th Cir. 1994); Ferguson v. F.B.I., 957 F.2d 1059, 1068-69 (2d Cir.1992) (Exemption 7(D) protection is available even if the source has testified at a hearing or the information provided by the source has otherwise been made public); Lesar v. U.S. Dep’t of Justice, 636 F.2d 472, 491-92 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Ortiz v. Dep’t of Health and Human Serv., 70 F.3d 729, 733 (2d Cir. 1995); United Technologies, 777 F.2d at 95. Moreover, Exemption 7(D) protection is not diminished by the fact that a charging party may ultimately withdraw his or her claim, or if the investigation or case has been closed. Ortiz, 70 F.3d at 733.
